Participants:

Hundreds of individuals and organizations participated in the development of the 2008-2013 Boulder County Human Services Strategic Plan. Their hard work and collaboration will help ensure the success of this plan to make Boulder County a livable and sustainable community.

Consulting Team:

Building Caring and Livable Communities depended on its consulting team, The Colorado Foundation for Families and Children – Ken Seeley, Carol Mehesy, Rita Schweitz, and Stephen Heiling, to design a framework for the plan and planning process, and to facilitate the many meetings involved in this process.

Community Planners and Program Experts:

This plan builds upon other existing plans, commissions, councils' recommendations and task force reports; the contributions of the organizations and planning entities whose work complements the BCHSSP was invaluable in making this plan as thorough as it is. Their work provided the foundation for identification of service needs, best practices and challenges facing our community, and was the groundwork from which this plan took shape.

Thank you to everyone who was involved in this forward-thinking undertaking; Boulder County will be a more humane and caring community as a result of this plan.

Introduction

For several years, human service funders including Boulder County, several municipalities, and major community funders have been discussing ways to better plan and coordinate funding and grant application/outcomes measurements for human service organizations. Nonprofit service providers have also grappled with the need for comprehensive and inclusive program planning, coordinated service delivery, addressing resource challenges created by the need for applying for grants from funders who ask for program, financial, and client data in all different ways, as well as being able to communicate to the public that funds are effectively and efficiently used and that services are not duplicated.

The idea of countywide comprehensive human services planning is not new; in fact many folks in our sector would say this conversation began 15 years ago, with the formation of the Human Services Coordinating Council.

The following guiding principles guide the implementation of the strategic plan and coordinated human services system.

- Our human services system maintains a safety net of services for Boulder County's most vulnerable residents, while remaining flexible enough to identify and respond to emerging needs.
- Our human services system honors and respects the rich diversity within Boulder County and, with the involvement of the various communities, strives to make all our services accessible, timely, and culturally relevant.
- Our human services system recognizes, respects, and builds on the strengths of individuals, families, and communities.
- Our human services system values moving people along the continuum toward self-sufficiency or stability, while providing ongoing support to those who need it in a manner that promotes maximum independence.
- Our human services system is responsive and accountable to the public for the best use of available resources in providing quality services.
- Our human services system values and promotes collaboration and coordination on every level including among local governments, private funders, non-profit community organizations, and our residents and consumers.

Using an inclusive and broad collaborative process, our mission is to develop a process that will result in a dynamic, accessible, coordinated, community-wide human service delivery system. The strategic planning process will ultimately result in:

- A shared vision and principles for a comprehensive human services system;
- An integrated and coordinated funding and delivery model that uses evidence based service and funding approaches with improved efficiencies;
- A safety net of services for Boulder County's most vulnerable residents;
- A comprehensive overview of needs and financial map of the major sources of support for human services by type of service;
- A unified application process for all funders to use with service providers;
- A plan for a unified performance measurement system;
- Maximum public benefit from all planning efforts;
- Flexibility to address emerging needs over time; and
- A collaborative governance model to manage the new system.

Background and Process

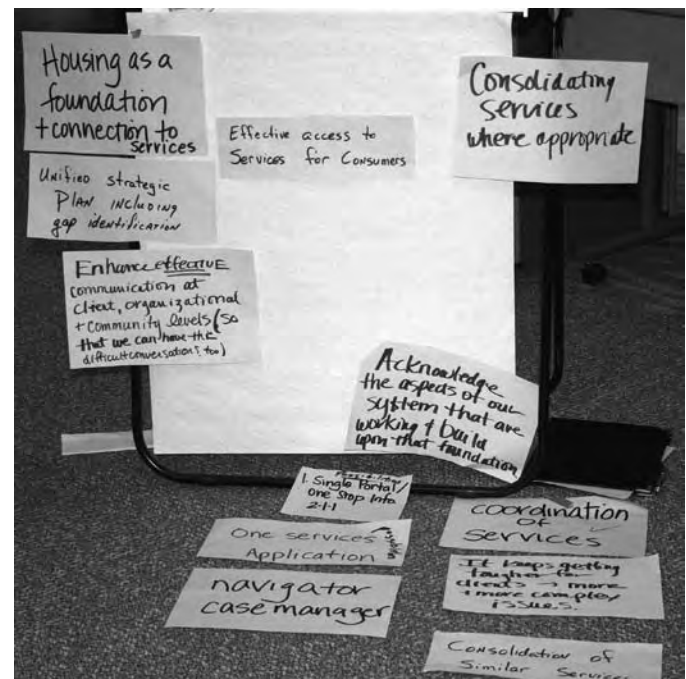

In December, 2006, the Human Services Coordinating Council appointed a Steering Committee to establish a coordinated human services planning process in order to improve the community based organization funding process in a way that would maximize the countywide investments in social and human services. The steering committee represented a broad-based group of municipalities, funders, and nonprofits. In order to support this effort, a Request for Proposals (RFP) was released and the steering committee selected the Colorado Foundation for Families and Children as its consulting team.

Developing a strategic plan for human services in Boulder County began as a community based approach that included multiple venues for community input. The initial core of this process was a very intensive two-day community-wide planning process known as a “Future Search”. The Future Search brought together 64 people representing a cross-section of the Boulder County community including: human service providers, funders, businesses, consumers, policy makers, educators, and multi-ethnic and cultural perspectives. The Future Search participants spent two days identifying Boulder County’s current needs and capacities, emerging trends and opportunities, and prioritizing areas of needed action. The Future Search identified seven priority areas to be addressed in the strategic plan including: self-sufficiency, education, prevention, advocacy, inclusiveness, coordinated services, and funding. Action Groups were then formed to address each of these priority areas following the Future Search (the Prevention group merged with the Education group for a total of six). Each Action Group was open to anyone in the community and each group met 2-5 times to develop specific goals strategies, benchmarks and outcomes for each of the priority areas. In addition to the Future Search and resulting Action Groups, four community forums and a half-day non-profit/funder summit were held to gather input into community priorities and the development of the strategic plan.

Throughout the process, a public website – www.buildinglivablecommunities.org – was created, maintained, and updated to ensure that anyone who was interested in reviewing and participating in the ongoing work of the plan could do so.

The critical objectives of our initial planning process were cross-systems administrative reforms (reducing fragmentation, duplication and ineffective delivery of services while improving efficiency) and this work was informed and completed by the action planning groups that were formed after the Future Search. An additional piece of work was added based upon input from community partners. A broad template of goals, strategies and recommended Possible Action Steps for Communities were created based upon key human service issue areas – meeting basic needs, improving access to health care, promoting economic well being and self sufficiency, and community safety. These issue areas were consolidated from the 11 that were identified in the Five Year Retrospective Needs Report as current human service challenges (based upon the data). This report provides a summary and synthesis of the most recent information about human services needs in Boulder County. Its intent is to inform and help guide the planning process. Three types of information were used: Need and resource assessments targeted at specific service areas, populations, or both; surveys; and quantitative data on prevalence and trends generated by local and state agencies

The report's content was limited, of necessity, by existing information. Topics and populations that were included and those that were not in no way reflected their importance, but rather the availability of data.

These topic areas will require further attention by service providers, advocates, government agencies, and people in need. It is the hope that the beginning of the Boulder County Human Services Strategic Planning process will provide a structure in which to bring together all of those working in, or concerned about, a particular human services area, on a continuing basis in a structured forum to discuss issues and share practices that work best. It is the vision of this planning process that we will be able to analyze current needs, identify effective strategies to meet those needs and measure our accomplishments – in order to increase the efficiency and accountability of social investments in health and human services, reduce fragmentation and duplication across the funding flows, and relieve the administrative burden of providing services. This will support yet another goal of the planning process – to communicate to funders, partners, taxpayers and clients how the overall community impact of public funds invested in human services can be better gauged and reported.

In addition to understanding how a system of coordinated services and funding could enhance broad community outcomes and quality of life measures, to reviewing recent data in a comprehensive manner, it was also the goal of the planning process to understand comprehensively how funds were allocated by Boulder County public moneys and private foundations/organizations. This “financial map,” is the beginning of an annual analysis of resources and in this first phase, focuses on funding provided by Boulder County, City of Longmont, City of Boulder, Foothills United Way, and the Community Foundation Serving Boulder County.

Next Steps and Implementation

Completing the 2008-2013 Boulder County Human Services Strategic Plan (BCHSSP) represents accomplishment of the first step of the planning process and the beginning of the next. Planning success is a function of community acceptance and implementation.

Phase II of the BCHSSP will include convening meetings to further develop human services cluster topics action steps, outcome measures, funding and policy implementation strategies to achieve the goals and outcomes established in the BCHSSP. Technical assistance training will be developed to help organizations use the BCHSSP as a tool to examine and determine strategic direction.

The sponsors of the strategic plan are aware that these goals cannot be achieved without the collaboration of everyone in the community. Implementation of a livable community blueprint involves all sectors of the community - private and public, for profit and not-for-profit, neighborhood by neighborhood. Enhancing quality of life for ALL means understanding, and then marshalling, the connections between individual and neighborhood, neighborhood and community, community and region, as well as among the multiplicity of people, institutions and systems that all factor into making change happen.

The next steps in building a livable community for ALL are to develop implementation plans that will prioritize human services needs and issues for funding decisions and advocacy activities. To accomplish this, the steering committee will continue to:

- Identify strategies to inform, educate and foster participation from all stakeholders;
- Engage and facilitate consumers, government, providers and community leaders in continuous dialogue and joint action to better connect human services with other systems within a livable community context;
- Identify priorities through needs assessment and similar research;
- Measure progress by identifying and reporting changes in neighborhood and community achievements; and
- Seek continuous improvement in the process through regular reevaluation.

The Plans

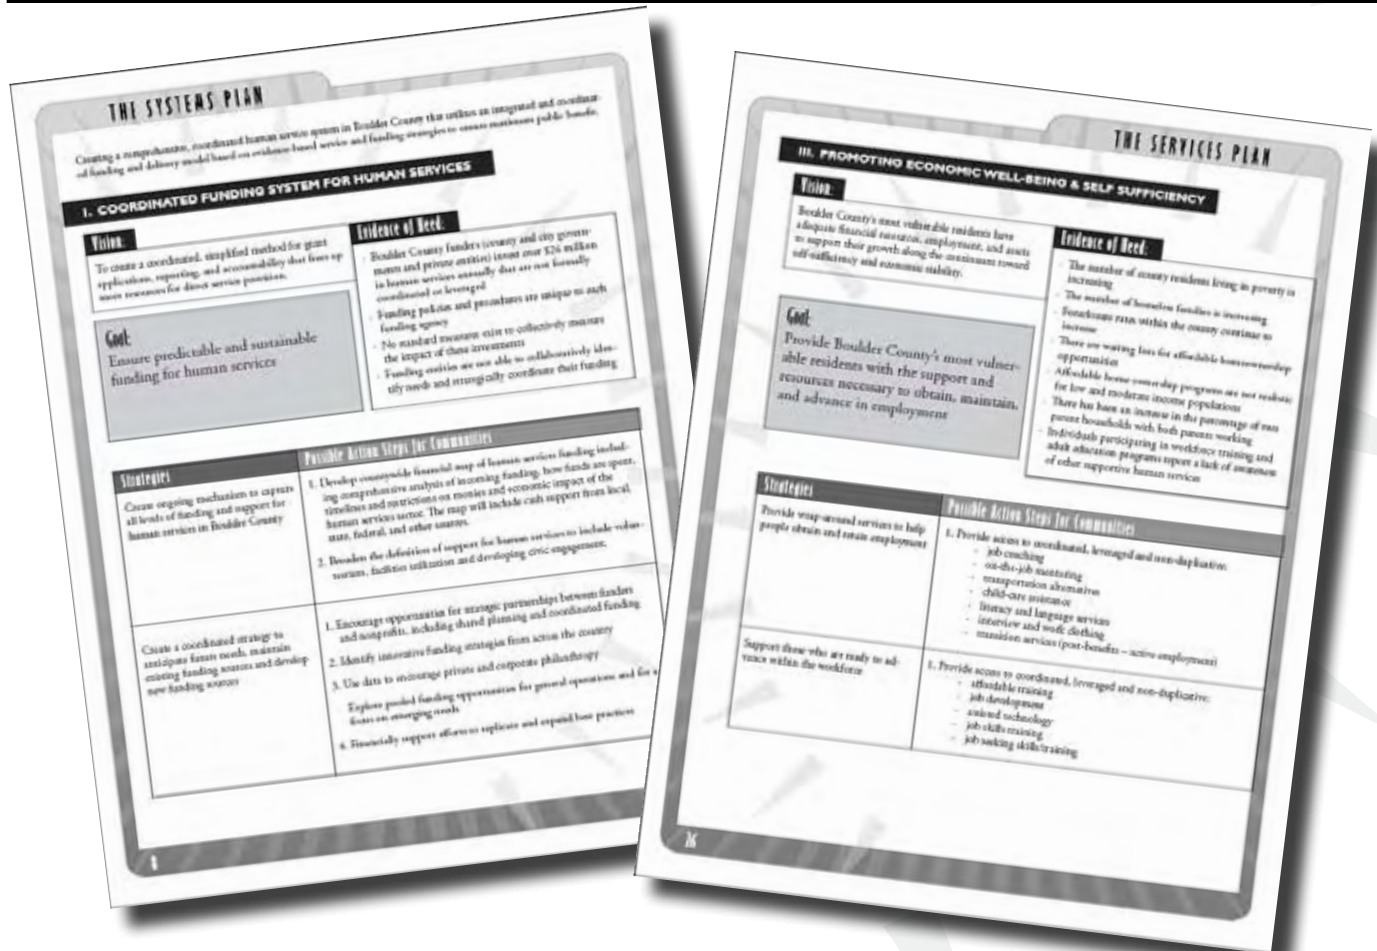

While reviewing the Systems and Services Plans, the reader should consider that the overall goals and strategies are not prioritized, and that the numbers are used simply for easier reference to and discussion of these items. The reader will also notice a certain, and intended, consistency in the general needs across all areas, the need to increase the level of awareness throughout the community (including providers and clients) of available services; expand the availability of services through better coordination, efficiencies and decreased duplication; and improve clients' ability to access services.

The planning framework also acknowledges that additional work is essential for the successful implementation of the plan. Redrafting and fine-tuning goals, prioritizing strategies and action steps, deciding on outcomes that are realistically achievable, and choosing indicators that can be used as benchmarks and measurements will be the work of the cluster groups, composed of expert service providers and convened and supported by the steering committee.

We hope that this initial work has developed a foundation on which a sustainable and ongoing planning process can successfully build.

Each Plan includes an overall plan definition, topic areas, a vision for each topic area, a consolidated list of evidence of need (identified through the 5 Year Restropective Needs Report), broad goals, strategies, suggested community action steps, and a consolidated list of what might change if we reached our goals. The latter is a consolidation of various community indicators that are currently tracked for Boulder County, and are not meant to be quantifiable outcomes or measures of success. Plan updates will include specific outcomes that are achievable and measurable.

THE SYSTEMS PLAN

Creating a comprehensive, coordinated human service system in Boulder County that utilizes an integrated and coordinated funding and delivery model based on evidence-based service and funding strategies to ensure maximum public benefit.

I. COORDINATED FUNDING SYSTEM FOR HUMAN SERVICES

Vision:

To create a coordinated, simplified method for grant applications, reporting, and accountability that frees up more resources for direct service provision.

Goal:

Ensure predictable and sustainable funding for human services

Evidence of Need:

- Boulder County funders (county and city governments and private entities) invest over $26 million in human services annually that are not formally coordinated or leveraged
- Funding policies and procedures are unique to each funding agency
- No standard measures exist to collectively measure the impact of these investments
- Funding entities are not able to collaboratively identify needs and strategically coordinate their funding

Strategies	Possible Action Steps for Communities
Create ongoing mechanism to capture all levels of funding and support for human services in Boulder County	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Develop countywide financial map of human services funding including comprehensive analysis of incoming funding, how funds are spent, timelines and restrictions on monies and economic impact of the human services sector. The map will include cash support from local, state, federal, and other sources 2. Broaden the definition of support for human services to include volunteerism, facilities utilization and developing civic engagement
Create a coordinated strategy to anticipate future needs, maintain existing funding sources and develop new funding sources	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> 1. Encourage opportunities for strategic partnerships between funders and nonprofits, including shared planning and coordinated funding 2. Identify innovative funding strategies from across the country 3. Use data to encourage private and corporate philanthropy 4. - An increase in legislation and policies that restrict the delivery of human services leave too many Boulder County residents without services The number of residents living below poverty levels is increasing
- Support from other levels of government (state and federal) is not keeping pace with the increase in demand for services at the local level
- Costs to deliver services are increasing disproportionately to the consumer price index
